Educational Aims of the Programme

The Bachelor of Theology for Ministry is taught over two years with a First Examination (1st year) and a Second Examination (2nd year).

The course aims:

i) to provide teaching and learning to undergraduate students in the theologies, scriptures, histories and philosophies, doctrines and practices of Christianity, principally within their own traditions but also by means of comparative approaches; and, as far as resources permit, of the traditions of other faiths;

ii) to provide students with an education in these traditions which is informed by current developments in scholarship and research and by critical reflection on pastoral experience;

iii) to provide a stimulating environment in which students can reach their intellectual potential in preparing for Christian ministry and service;

iv) to provide an integrated structure of learning and teaching;

v) to help students develop a wide range of intellectual and pastoral abilities and skills which will enable them to make a significant contribution in their chosen vocation.

On completion of the BTh students are expected to have acquired:

i) competence in the central theological sub-disciplines required for ministerial training, to a degree of breadth and depth as determined by sponsoring churches, by the Faculty of Divinity and by the Cambridge Theological Federation;

ii) the skills required for a critical reading of texts in a biblical language and for theological analysis and reflection on texts and experience;

iii) the ability to evaluate and relate theological arguments to pastoral practice in the context of their own confessional traditions.

Skills

On completion of the course, the University expects students to have acquired the following skills.

i) Knowledge and understanding of the subject matter.

ii) Intellectual skills: The written work which students undertake enables them to learn how to study steadily; assimilate issues and large amounts of literature swiftly; critically evaluate theological positions and evidence; produce succinct arguments to tight deadlines and engage with those with whom they disagree. Particular methodologies used include: textual critical, exegetical, hermeneutical, historical, philosophical, doctrinal, ethical and pastoral-reflective. Students will have acquired the skill to engage with the ideas of major religious thinkers and their traditions and to understand the historical, social and cultural context which shaped a text or affected a writer. Students will be able to read texts in the original language critically, evaluate them in their own context and become sensitive to the problems of religious language. Students will learn to present an argument and attain analytical skills. By the end of the course students will have completed a degree which provides the basis for their working lives in their sponsoring churches.

iii) Practical Skills: use of the library, use of e-journals and other on-line resources, using a bibliography, taking notes effectively, learning languages; pastoral skills for Christian ministry and service.

iv) Transferable skills: the ability to communicate effectively both orally and in writing; to work to deadlines and under pressure; to manage time; to set priorities; to formulate an argument; to work independently and with initiative; basic IT skills (email, computer and internet use); critical analysis; ability to present papers in a seminar context; linguistic skills; skills of analysis and interpretation; self-discipline; self-direction and respect for other views.

Teaching and Learning Methods

Teaching is delivered by lectures and classes in the Faculty and the Federation which relate to the papers offered in the B.Th., by language classes and by supervisions, which provide individual or small group teaching through written work and feedback thereon. Throughout the course, students are encouraged to undertake independent reading and study to consolidate what is being taught. Some lectures and classes are shared with those provided for the Theology, Religion, and Philosophy of Religion Tripos but the teaching through supervisions is exclusively for the B.Th. students.

Assessment Methods

Formative assessment is provided through the supervision system where feedback is given in oral and written form. Summative assessment, which takes place at the end of each year, is by a combination of two- or three-hour written examinations, 3,000-word essays, an optional 8-10,000-word dissertation and a pastoral portfolio based largely on work carried out while on placement.

Entry Requirements

The majority of candidates are admitted after being accepted by their churches to train for ordained ministry and students are required to meet the standard matriculation requirements of the University. The educational background of B.Th. students is very diverse, but almost all possess a degree in a subject other than Theology. The 2015/16 intake for the 1st Examination Year was 20,

REF: the Faculty of Divinity in Cambridge was ranked sixth in the country in the 2014 REF in the Unit of Assessment for Theology, Divinity and Religious Studies.

Learning Support

The core teaching staff consists of approximately 40 full- and part-time Federation Lecturers, who are Affiliated Lecturers of the Faculty, as well as a few Lecturers from other institutions for specific courses. Faculty Lecturers are involved where B.Th. papers share the teaching for Tripos papers.

Each of the Federation institutions has its own buildings in central Cambridge close to the Colleges and Faculties of the University. Teaching accommodation is located in each institution. The Federation Library, housed on six separate sites across Cambridge, contains over 100,000 volumes, 130 journals and 160 e-books and the Federation also subscribes to 300+ e-journals. More than 500 key readings are available in digitized form on the Federation’s intranet site, FedNet. B.Th. students have borrowing rights in the Faculty of Divinity as well as in the University Library and the libraries of their matriculating Colleges. Computer terminals on all the Federation sites give students access to online-library catalogues as well as to e-mail and word-processing facilities.

Career Destinations

Some graduates of the B.Th. decide to take higher degrees in Theology; others go into teaching or other careers. The majority, however, will have done the course with a specific view to entering full-time Christian ministry.

Quality Management

The Faculty Board is responsible for the teaching through its B.Th. Management Committee in partnership with the Federation’s Academic Committee. The quality of the course is maintained by:

i) scrutiny of the reports of External Examiners by the Faculty and the General Board’s Education Section. Suggestions by them for improvement are acted on where necessary;

ii) student feedback through questionnaires;

iii) student participation in the B.Th. Management Committee;

iv) Federation Lecturer participation in the Faculty’s training programme for supervisors;

v) appraisal and evaluation of staff and the provision of staff development programmes within the Federation; and

vi) the General Board’s programme for reviewing Faculties and Departments every six years.

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the information in this programme specification. At the time of publication, the programme specification has been approved by the relevant Faculty Board (or equivalent). Programme specifications are reviewed annually, however, during the course of the academical year, and any approved changes to the programme will be communicated to enrolled students through email notification or publication in the Reporter. The relevant Faculty or Department will endeavour to update the programme specification accordingly, and prior to the start of the next academical year.
